Lesson 6: Separation

□ Getting Started

In 1776, the colonies formally declared independence from Great Britain and began to seek foreign aid for the war effort. As John Adams was called to serve his country, both in the Continental Congress and as a diplomat to France, Abigail managed the family's affairs in America and kept in touch with John and with family and friends through regular correspondence.

In this lesson, you'll continue to work on grammar skills and explore vocabulary terms for the second half of the book.

Smallpox was a highly contagious virus. That caused blindness, disfigurement, and sometimes death. Europeans had battled smallpox for centuries, now the Colonists faced the diseases danger. In 1721, for example, more then half of the population of boston caught smallpox, and over 800 of them died. Those who caught the disease experienced high fever and body aches, and their bodies’ were covered by hundreds of small blisters, or pustules. Some colonists used inoculation to try to avoid the worst of the disease. The method required that they were injected with the virus. A true vaccine wasn’t developed until 1800.

Introducing the Lesson
In this lesson your child will practice paragraph editing and explore vocabulary terms for the next six chapters of the book.

Reading and Questions (with Answers)
1. When Abigail Adams went to hear the Declaration of Independence read, how did the people around her react to the document?
   - People reacted with great enthusiasm — symbols of the British crown were removed and the crowd shouted, "God save our American states!" (p. 78)
2. What argument did Abigail Adams make for educating women?
   - She wished for greater education so that she could be better educate her own children and believed that educating women would allow them to educate the next generation of citizens, which would be crucial in a new nation.
3. What do you think Abigail Adams was thinking and feeling when she learned that John would be dispatched to France?
   - Answers will vary, but your child should recognize that after long separations, she had very much wanted him to be home for a long period of time, so his going to France must have been unwelcome news.
4. What role did letter-writing play in Abigail Adams’ coping with the absence of her husband and son?
   - Answers will vary, but your child should understand that Abigail Adams shared her feelings in her letters and was able to connect with those who knew and understood her.

Activities

Activity 1: Paragraph Editing
Answer Key:
- misspelled words: contagious (1st line); than (3rd line); and vaccine (7th line)
- sentence fragment: 1st line (incomplete sentence should be joined to previous sentence ("contagious virus that caused blindness...")
- comma splice: 2nd line (to correct, put a period after "centuries" and begin a new sentence with "Now." Another option is to replace the comma with a semicolon.)
- apostrophe errors: 2nd line (disease’s) and 5th line (bodies) [first example needed an apostrophe added; the second needed it removed]
- capitalization errors: 2nd line (colonists should not be capitalized) and 3rd line (Boston should be capitalized)
- subjunctive mood: 6th line (change "that they were" to "that they be")
Activity 2: Vocabulary from Chapters 12-18

In this activity, your child will complete a puzzle related to vocabulary terms for the next several chapters of the reading.

Answer Key:
1 down: protocol
4 down: sedition
6 down: abhorrence
7 down: disconsolate
2 across: abolish
3 across: destitute
5 across: apprehension
8 across: impudence

Wrapping Up

Questions to Discuss

- Do you think it would be easier or harder for a married couple today to be apart as often and for as long as John and Abigail were? (Answers will vary. You may want to talk to your child about the length of time it might take for letters to travel in the colonies or overseas in the 1700s compared to the ability to stay in touch with cell phone, email, and social networking today.)
- What advice would you give someone who was learning how to edit paragraphs?

Things to Review

- Review your child’s answers to the reading questions.
- Review your child’s paragraph editing activity.
